Stengel Must Be Doing It With Mirrors

By JACK CUDDY
[Copyright, 1938, by United Press]

NEW YORK — Casey Stengel, "Clown Prince" of pilots, must be doing it with mirrors.

Here we are in the dog days, and the Boston Bees are doggedly battling for fifth place in Ford Frick's pennant chase. Which fact is causing no end of surprise among baseball experts and meanwhile elevating Mr. Charles Dillon Stengel to semi-pro status in the habitat of the cod and the bean.

When Casey quit getting paid for not managing the Brooklyn Dodgers and took over the Boston helm before the current season, his many friends shook their heads dolefully and heaved sighs of sympathy. They figured that the sail-eared wit was stepping right onto the great big "X" that marks one of baseball's toughest spots.

Mild Will McKechnie, probably the most able manager in all baseball, guided the stingless Bees to fifth place last year, before Will left for Cincinnati to resurrect the Reds. McKechnie admits he had considerable luck in topping second division with the Bees, particularly because of Messrs. Turner and Fette. Those two veteran rookie pitchers made history by winning 20 games each in their first year up. Such a freshman coincidence never happened before and probably will not again for many years.

Stingless Bees hit .243

Turner and Fette were considered a sensation and stole many fans away from Boston's Red Sox, who also finished fifth in the American division, but were considered a bust.

Such was the dangerous situation into which Casey Stengel thrust his weather-beaten neck. The Bees were fifth, commanding attention and finally making a bit of money. Stengel and other baseball people knew it was a tough spot. They knew Turner and Fette couldn't repeat, and the rest of the club didn't amount to much. It seemed that the Bees were destined to battling for last place with the Phillies.

And you wonder why the swarm isn't fighting for last place now if you look at Boston's club batting average, which is by far the lowest in either major league, about .243. Meanwhile, Turner and Fette are just about hitting their strides. Turner has won 10 and lost 13 games; Fette nine and eight.

Has Had Hard Luck

Despite the club's lack of batting punch, pitching has been Casey's biggest problem. Danny MacFayden, his ace right-hander, was out almost a month after being struck on the wrist by a batted ball. Milt Shoffner, his best southpaw, has just returned after having his appendix carved out.

In addition, Catcher Al Lopez was out for half the season with an arm injury, and Rightfielder Gene Moore has been an in-and-outer because of a bad knee.

When Casey first took over the wheel, Boston fans were somewhat bitter because they were losing the popular McKechnie. But now they are rooting lustily for Herr Stengel. Fans and writers feel that he has done a bang-up job with limited material and despite the injury jinx that hovered over key players. His wise-cracks in the face of adversity stimulated his popularity.

Does This Mean Terry?

Casey displayed top-flight managerial ability, particularly handling his players. He developed Dick Errickson (up from Scranton) into a starting pitcher and capable reliefer. He improved Johnny Cooney's play in right field. He worked hard with Max West, young outfielder up from the San Francisco Missions. West's fielding improved greatly and he shows promise of being a good hitter.

Also genial Casey probably is the only manager capable of handling temperamental Joe Stripp, who now is proving the best third baseman Boston has had in years.

Casey may be doing it with mirrors, or with hustle and sweat and brain work, but he's staging a grand comeback. And I'm sure that everyone who plays or watches or reads about baseball is delighted, because "he's a jolly good fellow."

And the game certainly needs more jolly good fellows in these days of nickle-nursing, sour-pussed, business-man players and pilots.
