Arkansas Hero Wins Medal of Honor

WASHINGTON— (U.P.) —Lieut. Edgar H. Lloyd, Blytheville, Ark., who wiped out five German machine gun nests with grenades, a submarine gun, and his fists, has been awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

The war department said the 23-year-old infantry officer performed the feat last Sept. 14 near Pompey, France. His act inspired his men to kill more than 100 Germans and destroy a dangerous wedge which the enemy had driven into the lines of the 80th division.

Lloyd was killed in action on Nov. 16, 1944.

The Republican legislator's bill would extend old age survivors' insurance provisions to employes of churches and religious organizations.

CHARLEMAGNE'S FORT GAVE START TO CITY OF HAMBURG

Several kinds of sausage were named after the cities in which they first became popular. Thus we have bologna of "boloney," from Bologna, Italy, and wieners from Wien, or Vienna, Austria.

In the same way we have the hamburger from Hamburg, Germany. Sometimes this product is given the dignified name of "Hamburg steak," but it is ground-up meat, the same as sausage, and it might be called "sausage without a casing around it."

Hamburgers have become very popular in the United States, where millions are eaten each year. When made from good meat, and well cooked, the hamburger is a healthful food.

The city of Hamburg is the second largest in Germany. In 1939 it had a population of 1,682,000, and was a good deal larger than Munich, the third German city.

The history of Hamburg goes back to the time of Charlemagne. That famous monach was the ruler of Germany, as well as France, and was, in fact, a German of the Frankish tribe.

In the year 808, Charlemagne ordered a fort to be built in the area where Hamburg grew up. A few years later, a church was built there, along with houses which formed a village. The name of Hamburg seems to have come from the forests, or "Hamme," around it.

Hamburg grew into an important city during the Middle Ages. The people took an important step toward becoming free citizens when they gave money to an emperor who was getting ready for a crusade to capture Jerusalem. The emperor, Frederick I, needed the money badly, and in return for it granted the city a charter. One right in the charter was that Hamburg should have a court of its own.

Before the outbreak of the second World war, Hamburg was a rival of Antwerp, Belgium, for the rank of "greatest port on the mainland of Europe." Yet Hamburg is quite a distance from the seacoast. A boat must go 75 miles up the Elbe river to reach it from the North sea.
