Story Of Yankee Tar To Be Dramatized On Wednesday Program; Edward G. Robinson Returns In New "Big Town" Drama

In the early days of the 19th century, ships that sailed the seas were almost completely at the mercy of the unpredictable whims of wind and wave. Sailors accepted their troubles as the price of conquering the seas. But there was at least one man who believed that the vagaries of the ocean could be predicted.

That man, Lieut. Matthew Fontaine Maury, U. S. N., who discovered that ocean currents and wind drifts could be mapped just as accurately as the rivers and mountain ranges of his native Virginia, will be honored by the Cavalcade of America in a drama entitled "Pathfinder of the Seas" over WEAF Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.
