So it is fortunate that most oysters do not live out their span of life. After all, we need a little space for ocean liners. The eggs of oysters are eaten by fish, jellyfish and many other ocean animals. The oyster larvas are gobbled up as they swim about Out of 15,000,000 eggs, less than a dozen may become full-sized oys ters.

Even after they grow to full size oysters are far from being safe. They may be eaten by starfish or crabs or large fish, and they be dredged from their beds by men. Many thousands of oysters are
