Rou. ay: I notice you are very lavish in your praise of rival coaches such as Bierman of Minnesota and Widdoes of Ohio State, but when you are dishing out praises, why not also include some for our own Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin? He doesn't have to take a back seat for anyone in the coaching business-he rates right up there with the best of them. Look at the coaching job he turned out this year with nothing but a bunch of green kids to start with. Look at the job he did a year ago with the All-Stars. I don't think I am far from wrong when I say that had Stuhldreher been coach of the All-Stars this year that they would have come out on top.

Of course Bierman has a good record as far as games won and lost are concerned. But why shouldn't he? Minnesota has always been loaded with talent. which has not always been the case here at Wisconsin. It's not so much winning games that counts when you have all kinds of material available, it's the fact that you can build up a football team from practically nothing a all and that's just what Harry can do. If Harry and his aid had some of the material the other coaches had available this year, it would have been

Underdog Role Just Suits TCU

Horned Frogs Prospered in It

This is the third of a series on the New Year's Day football bowl teams.

By ED FITE

FORT WORTH, Tex. -- (U.P.) --They'll be the second choice team n the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day, but that is all right with Coach Leo "Dutch" Meyer and his Texas Christian Horned Frogs, because they have thrived on an un-derdog role all season and don't ear Oklahoma A. & M. any more than any other team they have

Meyer doesn't exactly know himself how it happened that the Frogs won the Southwest Conference championship after they were picked to finish no higher than fourth in the six team race, but he is inclined to think that it must be because "they are the fightingest kids I ever coached."

"It was fighting spirit more than luck that got us through," he said. "These boys don't know what it is to fear an opponent. They don't know what it is to quit. I have coached teams with more experience, teams that gave more polmer Creighton university football ished performances, but never one star and two-time winner of that digs in harder when the going

Fifteen players carried the load through most of the season and they have been dubbed the "FFF" boys or the 15 Fighting Frogs. They include seven 17-year-olds, six men with military service medi-cal discharges, one 4-F, and one Navy V-12 student.

Among the starters are four players who were named to allconference teams. The mainspring of the eleven is Captain Clyde Flowers, a two-letterman senior at tackle, who gained all-America consideration. The others are Jimmy Cooper, first string center, who has the unique distinction of holding medical discharges from both the Army and Navy, Merle at end, and Norman Cox, the fullconference.

With Cox in the starting back-field are Halfbacks Bob Ruff and Randy Rogers and Quarterback Jim Busby, all 17-year-olds. Declared Solution on pass receptions.
