MAN WHO TAME! MONEY TACKLES ATOMIC POWER

Bernard M. Baruch, Long Active as Adviser, Assumes New Task

> By NATHAN OATIS (AP Newsfeature Writer

Bernard M. Baruch, 75. United States representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, is known as the man whose office is a park bench.

In the days when he was head of President Roosevelt's World War II rubber committee, starting in 1942, he used to hold conferences and frame policies on a bench in Lafayette Square, across the street from the White House. Such openness was characteristic. Baruch has shown a park sitter's temperament. He has been generous with many people and direct with some of them.
