By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY

WHILE I was laid up in the hospital in Pittsburgh, Pa., recently, one of my many welcome visitors was "Rosey" Rosewell, the famous Pirates baseball announcer. He told me some of his baseball yarns, which he has published in a book called "Diamond Laughs."

I asked "Rosey" if he took time out to play bridge. He replied, "I would play more, but piled, "I would play more, but you bridge players are so stuck up that you won't let a fellow play with his shoes off. I only have 10 fingers. If I have to count up to 13 when I play bridge, the shoes have to come off."

I then showed "Rosey" today's hand and asked him how he would count it. He said, "There are six clubs. That's the right are six ciuos. Inar's the right hand and the thumb on the left hand. A diamond and two spades take up all but one little finger." I told him to keep counting. Whereupon he said, "Why, I
