International Law Binds N. Korean Reds to Treat U. S. Prisoners Humanely

WASHINGTON, July 15. (AP) The North Koreans, according to their radio, are now going to treat American prisoners humanely.

They reached this viewpoint after three weeks of fighting in which from present evidence they bound and shot to death 18 captured Americans.

General Douglas MacArthur, both before and after those killings, had warned the North Koreans to give prisoners good care. If they didn't, he told them, he would hold the Communists responsible for "barbarity and murder."

The problem of how to treat captured soldiers has a long history. It was a problem back in the Greek-Roman days, when prisoners were slaughtered or enslaved. It has remained a problem.

The first meeting of big nations to discuss it was held in 1864 at Geneva, Switzerland. That meeting agreed on decent treatment for sick and wounded prisoners.

SKETCHY AGREEMENT This 1864 agreement was pretty sketchy so a bigger meeting was held at The Hague, in Holland, in 1907. There it was agreed all prisoners should be treated humanely.

But there were holes in this agreement, as World War I showed. So a third meeting on the subject was held at Geneva in 1929. Forty-seven nations took part in that.

This one went into more detail on the treatment of prisoners and one of the agreements reached there said: "Prisoners of war... must at all times be humanely treated and protected, particularly against acts of violence, insults and public curiosity. Measures of reprisal against them are prohibited."

Then World War II arrived. What happened to prisoners in that war made it clear that the treatment of prisoners should be spelled out even more clearly.

A fourth big meeting was held in Geneva in 1949. Sixty-one nations, including Soviet Russia, signed that agreement. But—The North Korean government hadn't signed the agreement.

NOT RECOGNIZED In fact, the North Korean government hasn't been recognized as a legitimate government by the United Nations. So the North Koreans, in defense of their actions, might argue: "Since they hadn't signed any agreement on the treatment of prisoners, they couldn't be held responsible for what they did to prisoners."

Against that argument, how could MacArthur and the United States tell the North Koreans flatly they would be held responsible? Government specialists on the subject give the answer this way: "The majority of nations have agreed that prisoners must be treated humanely and protected against harm. Therefore, humane treatment has the effect of international law, or custom, or commonly accepted practice."

And—since the North Koreans are part of the world and most of the world has agreed on how prisoners must be treated, the North Koreans must live up to the wishes of the rest of the world in handling prisoners.

The whole thing can be put more bluntly: Might makes right in the philosophy of nations. If we win in Korea, we can hold the Koreans responsible for mistreating prisoners, try them, and punish them.

If we lose, and the Communists win, then the North Koreans can go unpunished.

Actor to Be Seen as Noted General

WASHINGTON, July 15. (AP) George Washington is a right guy. I can testify to that because I had a chat with him.

The man I am talking about is the one who will play George in a play called "Faith of Our Fathers." The production will be a feature of the sesquicentennial, or 150th anniversary of the District of Columbia at the nation's headquarters.

The hero is a professional actor named Charles Frederick McClelland of New York, an old-timer who has played in such hits as "Tobacco Road" and "Boy Meets Girl."

In street clothes he looks about as much like the father of our country as Mortimer Snerd. But in colonial gear, the man will pass, all right.

TALL MAN His physical measurements are in line with our first president. McClelland, who played football for Carnegie Tech in 1926—the year Tech gave Notre Dame the old what-for, 19-0—is about the same height. He's six feet, three, in his socks, an inch taller in store-bought shoes.

Mac (let's call him) has a pretty big nose, which was kicked around on the gridiron. But it's not as big as the hooked job George Washington sported.

So before he came here for the first rehearsal of the play, McClelland went to his old friend, Dick Smith, a make-up expert for N. B. C. in New York.

Dick advised against masks, which are hot in the summer; also against putty noses, for the same reason. The N. B. C. man designed some rubber noses for the 1950 George—made out of rubber with holes inside for air-cooling.

SIX NOSES McClelland probably is the only man in the country with six noses, only one his own.
